were many smaller sellers ready to resist the decline.

During the final hour a calm settled on the pit and with the receipt of buil news from Buda Pest relative to almost total crop failure there and from Kansas City, where it was said that elevators were almost empty and but little wheat was to be had, the close was steady, with prices fractionally higher. Final quotations were: September, $1.65; December, $1.07%, cach option he over yesterday's close. Corn receipts were heavy and still larger arrivals are looked for next week. bass is a little more plentiful, but has never come up to expectations.

There was very little life in the fruit and vegetable markets yesterday. During the forenoon the housewives came out in fairly strong force to do their week-end marketing, but after noon everything was dull. There was no noveltles brought in by the farmers and the prices of most commodities were the same as they have been all the week.

by the farmers and the prices of most commodities were the same as they have been all the week.

Pickling necessities, which have been on the market for a whole week now, have not gone up as yet, as it was expected they would, the supply being larger than it seened. But the effect of the frosts that occurred at the beginning of the week are yet to be felt, and several vegetables will become scarce and dearer.

Somewhat unaccountable was the action of the Sait Bake produce exchange in cutting the price of four during the week and then putting it back again. A story was circulated last Tuenday to the effect that one of the firms outside of the exchange had cut flour 20 conts a hundred. As if to confirm this, the exchange came out with an announcement that at their meeting on Wednesday it had been decided to meet the cut in the price of flour. Afterwards the members of the firm accused of starting the downfall of flour absolutely repudiated the action and say now that they never cut flour and in fact had been unable all along to sell high patent for less than $2.00 a hundred. On Friday a special meeting of the produce exchange was hurriedly called for the purpose of replacing the price of flour where it belongs under the existing conditions.

Money In Grain Investments

Sound judgment counts for a great deal. The shrewd speculator is the one who watches the market, not the fool who rushes in just for the sake of dabbling. Saving from earnings is a slow way to accumulate wealth. Often times a single month of judicious trading will make a person inde-pendent for a lifetime. But speculation must be done with speculation must be done with judgment and with a good reason for every move. To speculate successfully the temper of the market should be watched and the condition of the crops studied. There is no necessity of becoming over-stocked or loaded down with the convert model as in the state of the crops and the condition of the crops studied. over-stocked or loaded down with shop-worn goods, as in business. You can quit at a moment's vanities. That is where graintrading differs from dealing in ordinary commodities. Grain has always an instantly ascertainable value dependent alto-gether on supply and demand. The grain market fixes the price and you always know what that value is. We have had years of experience dealing in grain. In fact, we are the oldest house of its kind in St. Louis, or west of Chicago; established 1892. We are in direct communication with the world's great markets by direct private wires. We publish a booklet on speculative investments and a red booklet of valuable statistics. Both free on request.
